the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are aged 65 and over has increased by 1.5 million, and the number of people aged 75 and over has increased by 1.1 million (Office of National Statistics 1999). The number of people aged 65 and over is projected to increase to 6.5 million by 2011, and the number of people aged 75 and over to 3.5 million (Office of National Statistics 1999).

There is a growing awareness of the need to address the needs of older people in the UK. The Department of Health (1999) has published a strategy for older people, which sets out the government's commitment to improve the health and social care of older people. The strategy is based on the following principles: (1) to ensure that older people have access to the services they need; (2) to ensure that older people are treated with respect and dignity; (3) to ensure that older people are able to live independently; (4) to ensure that older people are able to participate in society; and (5) to ensure that older people are able to live in their own homes. The strategy is being implemented through a number of measures, including: (1) increasing the number of health and social care professionals who work with older people; (2) improving the training and skills of health and social care professionals; (3) increasing the number of health and social care services available to older people; (4) improving the quality of health and social care services; and (5) increasing the involvement of older people in the development and delivery of health and social care services.

The Department of Health (1999) has also published a number of guidelines for health and social care professionals who work with older people. These guidelines are based on the following principles: (1) to ensure that older people are treated with respect and dignity; (2) to ensure that older people are able to live independently; (3) to ensure that older people are able to participate in society; and (4) to ensure that older people are able to live in their own homes.
